Changes coming to Liberty Community Center memberships, including free fitness classes, childcare and first price increase in eight years

LIBERTY, Mo. – Beginning Aug. 1, memberships to the Liberty Community Center will include all group fitness classes, allowing members to add a little variety to their workout regimen.

“Including fitness classes in the membership provides enhanced value, greater flexibility and more choices for our members,” said Donna Kay Taylor, Liberty Parks and Recreation’s Facilities and Member Services manager. “Keeping with national fitness trends, switching up your workout routine helps eliminate workout boredom, offers your mind and body a new challenge and improves your workout results.”

Group fitness classes will be available to community members who purchase an annual membership, a summer pass, a day pass, a swipe card pass or a Silver Sneakers Card. However, for those that plan to regularly participate in a class, the best purchase option is the annual membership.

In addition to the free classes, members with young kids will enjoy free child care while they workout.

With these added benefits, members will see the first membership fee increase in more than eight years beginning in August. Family memberships for up to five people will increase less than $10 per month. Single adult memberships will increase less than $5 per month, and senior and youth memberships, less than $4 per month.

For paid-in-full members, the new membership rate will go into effect on their renewal date. For bank draft members, the new membership rate will go into effect on Aug. 15.

The Liberty Community Center annual member rewards program will continue to provide discounts on many Parks and Recreation Department programs, Liberty Community Center rentals and early registration opportunities.

For more information about your membership or the fees increases, call 816.439.4364 or visit www.ci.liberty.mo.us/MembershipEnhancements.
